

User interface specification of user management screen

The screenshot shows a user management interface. On the left, there is a table titled "User Management" with columns: ID, User Name, Email, and Enabled. Two rows are visible: "1 AdminUser admin@piworks.net true" and "2 Test User testuser@piworks.net true". At the top left, there are buttons "+ New User" and "Hide Disabled User". At the top right, there is a "Save User" button. On the right, a "New User" form is displayed with fields for Username, Display Name, Phone, Email, and User Roles (with "Guest" selected). There is also an "Enabled" checkbox and a dropdown menu for User Roles containing "Guest", "Admin", and "SuperAdmin".

Purpose

The general purpose of this screen is manage users by listing already registered users in a table and allowing to register a new user.

1. Default view

- 1.1. By default, list of already registered users and their data is displayed in table.
- 1.2. Table consist of 4 columns ID, User Name, Email and Enabled.
- 1.3. Each column has specific filter button on the top row where user can filter by clicking the filter button of the desired column.
- 1.4. Each column also has specific sort button on the top row where user can sort the desired column.
- 1.5. User can select “Hide disabled User” checkbox on the top left of the page to hide disabled users in the table.

2. New user registration

- 2.1. User can click “New User” button on top left corner of the page to register a new user. Once clicked, New User tab opens on the right side of the page.
- 2.2. New User tab includes text fields of Username, Display Name, Phone and Email where user can enter the data.
- 2.3. User tab also includes “User Role” dropdown field and “Enabled” checkbox. By selecting from dropdown field user can chose one of the roles as Guest, Admin or SuperAdmin. User also can select Enabled checkbox to enable user.
- 2.4. Once the data is filled in the New User tab, user can save the new user by clicking “Save User” button on the top right corner of the page.